A story with a key: the resemblance to real-life characters is not coincidental. Some characters may be out of the limelight (temporarily). But in real life - as in the show - everything has happened before and will happen again. Any comeback is possible.

The chairman of the television company prepares a new reality show together with a priest interested in the Church's return to glory, power and wealth. The show, based on ancient folk rituals, will be filmed in one of the Polish chapels in the countryside. It is supposed to be a television hit but turns out to be - surprise! - a disaster.

The ghost of a famous singer arrives at the chapel in Podlasie. The good news: the ratings go up. The bad news: the singer did not die. She has not been summoned from beyond the grave but from a walk with her dog. All this causes understandable social unrest. Events are speeding up, many people want to go to the other side, and many souls want to return to Earth.

For the chairman, this is a time of trial. Will he resist the pressure of his party bosses? Will a Polish Madonna save him?
